Snack cake remake

Twinkies making a comeback

CNN

Good news, Twinkies fans: Your beloved snack is due back on shelves July 15.

The announcement was made by Daren Metropoulos, principal of Metropoulos & Co., one of the two companies that bought the rights to Twinkies and other snack brands from the bankrupt Hostess Brands earlier this year.

The new Twinkies box will look very similar to the old one, with the addition of the line "The sweetest comeback in the history of ever." The price will stay the same as it was last fall when Hostess shut down—$3.99 for a box of 10. Other products also will come back with the same pricing.

"America wanted Hostess back—they wanted the original," Metropoulos said.

The new company will sell all of the Hostess and Dolly Madison-branded snack products, including CupCakes, Donettes, Zingers, Ho Hos, Ding Dongs, fruit pies and mini muffins. Some products, such as Sno Balls, will take a little longer to return to shelves, but they should be available within the next few months.

Other Hostess brands, including Wonder Bread and Drake's snack cakes, have been sold to other firms. Details of their return have yet to be announced.

Wonder Bread, Twinkies and other Hostess products have not been produced since November, when Hostess Brands Inc. filed with the bankruptcy court to liquidate its 82-year-old business following a crippling strike by the Bakery Workers union.

While that company is out of business, and most of its 18,500 employees have lost their jobs, a bankruptcy court has been overseeing an auction of its various brands as part of the liquidation process.

HOSTESS LEFTOVERS

The new snack company, Hostess Brands LLC, was purchased for $410 million by private equity groups Apollo Global Management and Metropoulos & Co. It also bought five of the closed bakeries as part of the bid. It will produce the products out of four of the bakeries—in Columbus, Ga., Emporia, Kan., Indianapolis and the Chicago suburb of Schiller Park. It plans to have about 1,800 employees making the snacks within the next three months. Metropoulos' other food holdings include Pabst Blue Ribbon beer.

In the past it has owned:

1. Chef Boyardee canned pasta
2. PAM cooking spray
3. Bumble Bee seafood
4. Gulden's Mustard

All eventually were sold to ConAgra Foods Inc.

CTA: Safety is the No. 1 priority

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

trswartz@tribune.com
@tracyswartz

Two CTA bus drivers were attacked last week, reportedly by CTA riders, but the CTA says it has seen fewer incidences of violence against its employees than it did last year.

The CTA said it has recorded 11 incidents against CTA employees so far this year. There were 26 last year.

"Obviously we'd like the number to be zero. Fortunately, those numbers aren't very high when you think about the volumes of buses and drivers we put out each day," CTA spokesman Brian Steele said. "Two in a week is definitely out of the ordinary."

A 32-year-old man was charged with aggravated battery to a transit employee and aggravated battery causing great bodily harm after he allegedly threw hot coffee on a bus driver he said didn't stop to pick him up Friday.

Meanwhile, a 33-year-old man was charged with aggravated battery of a transit employee and criminal sexual abuse after he reportedly molested a bus driver as she drove Wednesday.

CTA bus drivers and train operators are provided basic security training, including how to handle an unruly passenger and what to do in an emergency, Steele said. They also learn protocol on how to diffuse conflicts with riders.

Operators are taught how to use different security features, including the emergency communications system, which is like a silent alarm that allows operators to discreetly tell the CTA control center about an issue. Also, all CTA buses are equipped with up to 10 cameras.

Most buses also have a clear barrier to protect CTA bus drivers. The buses without the barrier are being phased out, Steele said.

The CTA said it is reviewing the details of both incidents last week. In the meantime, bus drivers have regular "rap sessions" at CTA garages to discuss issues, such as safety and security, and whether there's a problem along their route.

"Safety and security is our No. 1 priority, not only for our customers but for our operators as well," Steele said.

STATIONARY A weekly dispatch from a CTA station of note

This week: Kimball Brown Line

While some end-of-line stations are major transportation hubs that serve as busy transfer points (think: Midway Orange Line and Howard Red Line stations), the Kimball Brown Line stop is much less imposing. Only three bus lines drop off at the Albany Park stop, compared with a half-dozen CTA buses at the Howard stop. The best feature of the Kimball station is the complete weather-protection along the platforms—though typically there already is a waiting train. The worst part is that riders are not sure exactly when the train will depart. Train trackers for end-of-line stations rely on the train's schedule, not its GPS, to inform riders when the train is leaving the station because the train is already at the station. Next up: Damen Brown Line

Cornell Wrightington thwarted an assault on a young woman early Sunday in the alley near his Gold Coast condo building. NANCYSTONE/TRIBUNE

Doorman to the rescue

Attacker chased off by man working overnight for a friend

Chicago Tribune

Cornell Wrightington may not look like a hero.

The father of two girls is soft-spoken and wears crisp white shirts in his job as doorman at a Gold Coast condo building. But at dawn Sunday, while working an overnight shift for a friend, Wrightington rushed to the rescue of a young woman who was being assaulted in an alley.

"I saw somebody who needed my help," Wrightington, 44, said Monday. "I was just fortunate I was covering a shift for someone."

Wrightington said he was sitting in the glass lobby of the building at 30 W. Oak St. around 5:40 a.m. when he noticed a young woman walking past his building and talking on her cellphone.

Then Wrightington spotted a man who walked across the street and started following her from a distance.

"When she would slow down, he would slow down," he said. "Something was wrong with that picture. ... She didn't notice him, but I noticed him. It was the way he was behaving and his demeanor. He was fidgety and nervous."

The woman cut through an alley behind the building and headed toward Maple Street.

The man walked past the alley and then did something that really caught Wrightington's attention.

"He doubled back" and disappeared into the alley, Wrightington said.

Without thinking, Wrightington said he ran to the alley.

"I saw her feet kicking and heard her screaming, 'Please don't hurt me, please don't rape me,'" he said.

He rushed down the alley and saw the man on top of her. He had removed his navy

THE INVESTIGATION

Police described the attacker as a black man between the ages of 35 to 45. He has a dark brown complexion and is about 5-foot-9 to 6-foot-2 and 240-260 pounds. Police said the attacker also is suspected of attacking a woman June 17 in the 1100 block of North Clark Street.

T-shirt and was holding it over her mouth to muffle her screams.

"I heard her begging and pleading not to do this, so I ran up on him and yelled at him," Wrightington said. "I ordered him to get up off her and let her go."

"When he saw me, he got off her and took off running," said Wrightington, who added that the attacker fled north onto Maple Street. Wrightington said he ran to the woman's side. "I said, 'Come with me, you're not OK,'" said Wrightington, who walked her to his lobby where she called her sister and he called 911.

Litter ordinance stalls in committee

Chicago Tribune

Chicago aldermen talked Monday about the need to clean up the litter on city streets but stopped short of voting on a proposal that would allow police to impound a vehicle and levy a $1,500 fine if an adult in the car throws trash out the window.

The measure's sponsor, Ald. Howard Brookins Jr. (21st), said the garbage on the streets in his South Side ward is deterring businesses from investing in an area that desperately needs jobs.

"People constantly and continually discard trash, and unfortunately it's primarily in my neighborhood, which discourages development within the community," Brookins said at a City Council Finance Committee meeting.

Brookins' plan would raise the fines for anyone throwing trash out the window of a stationary or moving vehicle to $1,500 from a current range of $50 to $200. In cases where the litterer is 16 or older, the car would be impounded.

EXPRESS LINES

- » Two adults who suffered smoke inhalation and a firefighter who injured his hand were taken to hospitals following an extra-alarm fire Monday that officials say might have been caused by children lighting fireworks in Little Village.
- » Police are investigating the death of a man whose body was pulled from the lake Monday morning near Belmont Harbor. Police were conducting a death investigation and no other details were available.
- » A veteran Chicago police sergeant was arrested Monday for allegedly attempting to extort a West Side liquor store employee by offering to look up police reports, license plates and other information in exchange for cash. TRIBUNE

Mandela's condition deteriorates

1 South Africans adopted a mood of resignation Monday to the inevitability of saying goodbye to former president Nelson Mandela after the 94-year-old anti-apartheid leader's condition deteriorated to critical.

D.C. to Moscow: Hand over Snowden

2 The U.S. on Monday increased pressure on Russia to hand over Edward Snowden, the American charged with disclosing secret U.S. surveillance programs, and said it believed he still was in Moscow despite earlier reports he was leaving for Cuba.

Afghan presidential palace attacked

3 A group of attackers stormed the entrance to the presidential palace in Kabul on Tuesday, a staffer inside told CNN. The staffer reported explosions and gunfire. The palace is located near the U.S. embassy.

Court: No ruling on affirmative action

Affirmative action backers expressed relief Monday as the U.S. Supreme Court avoided a major ruling in a closely watched case on the racial admissions policy at the University of Texas by sending the case back to a lower court.

Berlusconi gets 7 years, is barred from office

4 A panel of judges on Monday sentenced former Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi to seven years in prison for abusing power and having sex with an underage prostitute. Judges also barred him from holding public office.

IRS agents didn't just target Tea Party

5 Internal Revenue Service agents used more than just "Tea Party" and other conservative terms to screen tax exempt applications, the IRS chief said Monday after a monthlong review ordered by President Obama.

Zimmerman faces trial

6 SANFORD, Fla. The first day of testimony in the George Zimmerman murder trial concluded Monday, after jurors heard from a police dispatcher, a 7-Eleven clerk and a teenager who was with 17-year-old Trayvon Martin the day he was killed.

Earlier, attorneys for both sides gave opening statements, telling their version of what happened the night Zimmerman killed Martin, a homicide that set off weeks of civil rights rallies.

Defense attorney Don West concluded a lengthy opening statement for the defense, telling jurors that Zimmerman is not guilty: "He shot Trayvon Martin in self-defense after being viciously attacked."

However, West told the jurors there are no "monsters" in the case. Then he told an ill-received knock-knock joke: George Zimmerman who? "All right, good. You're on the jury."

He apologized for the joke after lunch, blaming his delivery.

West went into a detailed chronological breakdown of Zimmerman's call to Sanford police to report Martin as suspicious, which the jurors also heard. He said Zimmerman did initially follow Martin, but stopped when he was told not to.

Earlier, prosecutor John Guy began his opening statement with a profanity: "[Bleeping] punks." He said that phrase was how Zimmerman described Martin during his non-emergency call to police before the shooting, and shows the defendant's mentality.

When Zimmerman saw Martin, the prosecutor said, he "didn't see a young man walking home." Instead, he profiled, pursued and killed Martin, Guy said.

"He profiled him as someone who was about to commit a crime in his neighborhood, and then he acted on it, and that's why we're here," Guy said.

Later, Zimmerman "pressed that gun into Trayvon Martin's chest," Guy said, and pulled the trigger. He said that the evidence in the case, and testimony from witnesses, would contradict Zimmerman's account, which Guy called a "tangled web of lies."

Blackhawks players and coaches pose after winning the Stanley Cup on Monday. US PRESSWIRE

HOLY SMOKES, CAN YOU BELIEVE IT? HAWKS ARE CHAMPS AGAIN!

The Blackhawks are coming home.

As 2013 Stanley Cup champions.

After five-plus thrilling, grueling months of hockey, the Hawks have reclaimed their sport's ultimate prize. This calls for a parade!

But first the Hawks had to close out the Bruins. And while you wouldn't think summer heat would dominate the conversation leading up to Monday's Game 6 in Boston, the fog inside the TD Garden caused by high temperatures outside was too weird to ignore.

Here's how Monday's showdown unfolded, and who brought the heat. REDEYE

BLACKHAWKS VS. BOSTON

(Hawks win series 4-2)

Game 1: Blackhawks 4, Bruins 3 (3OT)

Game 2: Bruins 2, Blackhawks 1 (OT)

Game 3: Bruins 2, Blackhawks 0

Game 4: Blackhawks 6, Bruins 5 (OT)

Game 5: Blackhawks 3, Bruins 1

Game 6: Blackhawks 3, Bruins 2

FIRST PERIOD

HOT

Corey Crawford

The Hawks goaltender did give up a goal, but he also stopped 11 shots. He literally used his head on one save—and his helmet came off.

HOTTER

Brent Seabrook

The Hawks' overtime hero from Game 4 came up huge again. This time, he blocked not one but two Boston shots that would have been ticketed for the net. Yeah, the score could have been MUCH worse.

HOTTEST

Chris Kelly

At 7:19, the Bruins forward buried an easy one on a pass across the crease from Tyler Seguin, giving Boston a 1-0 lead. The Bruins looked like the better offensive team at this point. Not a good sign.

Score: Bruins 1, Blackhawks 0

US PRESSWIRE

SECOND PERIOD

HOT

Tyler Seguin and Chris Kelly

Yup, these two were causing trouble for the Hawks again. This time they drew a penalty on the combustible Andrew Shaw. Intelligent strategy on their part. Boneheaded reaction on Shaw's part.

Tuukka Rask

The Bruins goaltender made "only" eight saves in the period, but the ones he made often were spectacular. His left skate in particular was in the right place at the right time on a Hawks power play. Rask even survived getting plowed by Bryan Bickell—not easy to do.

Jonathan Toews

What upper-body injury? Toews streaked up the right side and fired it past Bruins goaltender Tuukka Rask five-hole at 4:24, tying the game at 1. Patrick Kane was the perfect decoy on the two-one-one. Toews almost scored again with a few seconds left in the period. You can't keep a good captain down.

Score: Blackhawks 1, Bruins 1

US PRESSWIRE

THIRD PERIOD

HOT

Milan Lucic

The burly Bruins forward's fourth goal of the Stanley Cup Final, at 12:11 of the third period, was almost a backbreaker for the Hawks. Key word: Almost.

HOTTER

Bryan Bickell

His first goal of the Cup Final—and ninth of the playoffs—saved the Blackhawks from overtime. Tip of the cap to Toews, whose nifty pass across the crease set him up.

HOTTEST

Dave Bolland

You would never call Bolland an offensive stalwart. But who cares?! He scored the winning goal with less than a minute left, and just 17 seconds after Bicks tied it. Wow.

Final score: Blackhawks 3, Bruins 2

| 1 | Who has been the Hawks' unsung hero this postseason?               | Ray Emery, for perfectly doing nothing.  | The Bruins goalie.  | Patrick Kane's bartender.   | Dan Carcillo's seat in the press box. Thank God it exists.               | Andrew Shaw's shin pads. Also: Q's overlooked and outshined chest hair. |
| 2 | What's the hallmark of every legendary playoff beard?              | They haven't been attached to Jonathan Toews.  | Hoisting the Stanley Cup right next to it ... or it was a bad idea. | Typically when the beard outshines what's on the head—that's always a sexy look.                        | Live animals able to burrow and slumber.                                 | If a barber shouts "Vito, get the hedge clippers!"                      |

THE HAT TRICK

WHAT'S BUZZIN' IN THE BLACKHAWKS' WORLD

Hot chocolate is for wimps

As a kid, Blackhawks forward Jonathan Toews' family built a rink each winter outside their home in Winnipeg, Manitoba. Toews would skate with his friends on the weekends. After a while his friends would go in for hot chocolate, but Toews would stay out, his father, Bryan, told ESPN. "He was just happy on his rink and he just played and played. He just loved it," Toews told the network.

Follow that puck!

The NHL still has no clue what happened to the puck from Patrick Kane's Stanley Cup-winning goal in 2010. The league now does save pucks used to score goals during the Cup Final, said John Dellapina, NHL vice president of communications. However, he added that "we do not log or collect pucks that players take for themselves [such as for milestone goals]." So, it would be up for grabs then?

Whatever works

The Blackhawks probably—emphasis on probably—would not have made it this far in the postseason without some "help" from loyal fans. We asked our Twitter followers what superstitions are a must for the playoffs. Here were some of their answers:

@janders1 Bar seat at Murphy's is a must.

@KristinShotJR I finally got out of work, came home and I'm wearing the exact same shirt I wore out for game six in 2010.

@ReallyLaLa1 right side of the couch, home watching alone, hike jersey, Hawks slippers, Lemonheads in the 3rd.

@Texasrulzgr1 I call my mom during the second period. It's worked the last 2 games.

@grasscutter31 I do, same sitting position, remotes in same position, and can't hear the "light it up" song on game day

Pippen not charged in fight

Bulls legend Scottie Pippen turned himself over to police to be questioned about his involvement in a fight outside a restaurant that sent a man to the hospital, officials said. Pippen had been at Nobu Malibu in California when a fight broke out between him and the man around 6:30 p.m. Sunday, the Los Angeles County sheriff's office said. By Monday afternoon, Pippen was allowed to leave without being charged, officials said.

Fans celebrate Monday after the Blackhawks won the Stanley Cup. MICHAEL TERCHA/TRIBUNE

Let the party begin!

Plans in the works for victory parade

Chicago Tribune

The cheers of exultant Blackhawks fans filled Madison Street on Monday, a roar that began with Dave Bolland's goal to put them up 3-2 and built to a crescendo as time expired in the third period.

Police officers and squad cars lined Madison, just a few blocks east of the United Center and home to a strip of bars that pride themselves on providing a stadium-style experience.

Third Rail Tavern owner Danny Shapiro looked on unworried.

"The Hawks fans in 2010, they really kept it classy," he said late in the third period. "We didn't have any problems."

But for the distant boom of fireworks and dozens of fans trickling out of the bars into the street, championship fever indeed seemed fairly orderly in the first minutes after time expired.

For Shapiro, it was a bittersweet end to a magical season that saw the Hawks rescue the NHL with a fan-friendly winning streak and an epic finals that gave fans nearly seven games worth of hockey in a closely fought six-game series that featured multiple overtime games.

"As a businessman, a Game 7 would be great, but as a Hawks fan, I'm sick of the Bruins," Shapiro said.

Earlier in the evening, nervous energy gathered like thunderheads over Chicago as the puck dropped in the Blackhawks' Game 6 matchup with the Boston Bruins, and the 3900 block of North Kenneth Avenue in Old Irving Park was just one among many pockets of championship stress across Chicagoland.

Since 2010, neighbors in the close-knit North Side neighborhood have gathered for Hawks playoff games—almost always outdoors, though the venue rotates to one of three or four houses on the block anytime Chicago loses.

Bill McCaffrey, a spokesman for Mayor Emanuel, said Monday night that the city and the Blackhawks were planning a rally for sometime this week. But no date was yet set, McCaffrey said.

In 2010, the previous time the team won the Stanley Cup, Chicago feted the club with a massive parade and rally that was one of the best-attended celebrations in city history.

Mad Men MADNESS

By Megan Crepeau | REDEYE

It's enough to make you want to spear your boyfriend in the stomach. After Sunday's season finale of "Mad Men," we won't see new episodes for months and months. But don't punch that mattress quite yet, Sylvia. That just means we get plenty of time to speculate about what will happen in the show's seventh and final season. Here are the odds, folks: Get ready to place your bets. (Warning: Minor spoilers for Sunday's season finale ahead!)

THE DIGIT

That's how many Sour Patch Kids candies an artist used to re-create Amanda Bynes' famous Twitter selfie, eonline.com reports. That calculates to 15 pounds and 15,000 calories.

BAD BIEBER

JUSTIN BIEBER IS GROUNDED.

The Great Canadian Hope has been banned from Las Vegas Indoor Skydiving, a rep for the company tells eonline.com. While details of what led up to that decision come only from unnamed insiders, it does beg the question: Really?! And also: How badly do you have to behave to be banned from a place in Sin City?!

DEC. 13

HOT DATE

That's when Beyonce will return to Chicago for a concert at the United Center, pitchfork.com reports. The Mrs. Carter Show World Tour already had a sold-out stop in Chicago scheduled for July 17.

Jim Carrey in 'Kick-Ass 2'

Too violent?

Don't look for Jim Carrey to promote "Kick-Ass 2." He has taken to Twitter to distance himself from the movie, due out Aug. 16, because he said he "cannot support that level of violence" in the wake of the Sandy Hook Elementary School massacre, in which 20 children and six educators were slain last December, the Los Angeles Times reports.

JC Brooks and the video

How do you get your music video noticed these days? Put everyone's TV crushes in it, of course. Aubrey Plaza ("Parks and Recreation") takes a bath and Jake Johnson ("New Girl") does push-ups in the video for JC Brooks and the Uptown Sound's "Rouse Yourself." Look closely and you'll also see the "L" and a billboard for Reckless Records!

“Man, I'm the No. 1 living and breathing rock star. I am Axl Rose; I am Jim Morrison; I am Jimi Hendrix.”

—Kanye West, to W magazine, on his reaction to being snubbed at Paris Fashion Week. He wrote "I Am a God" the next day.
